GOTHAM GOSSIP.

How Oscar Was Bunkoed—Kate Field—The Passion Play—Nilsson's Kindly Nature—A Pioneer Printer—Theater Sold, etc.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Capt. Williams has verified the story of Oscar Wilde being taken in by bunko steerers. The captain says that two weeks ago Oscar while walking on Broadway, near Union square was accosted by a hatchet faced young man who introduced himself as a son of Drexel the banker. Wilde was delighted and they went to a restaurant, where Mr. Drexel ate as though hungry. Wilde remembered this and not with an esthetic smile later in the day when informed by Capt. Williams that Mr. Drexel was "Hungry Joe," a noted bunko steerer. Then followed the old winning lottery ticket scheme. It was [illegible] until Wilde became excited over the game he played until he lost [illegible] He sold a check on the Madison Square bank for the amount, rushed into the street, jumped into a cab and drove rapidly to the bank and stopped the payment of the check.

One of the morning papers gives the following account of the Oscar Wilde swindling:

Oscar Wilde really was beaten out of money by bunko men, and merely regained it by being swifter than his swindlers. Two weeks ago, Wilde walked up Broadway, near Union square, when a hatchet faced man accosted him and introduced himself as a son of Drexel the banker, who had seen the poet in his father's office and took the liberty of making his acquaintance. Wilde was delighted and they went to the restaurant. During the meal Drexel incidentally mentioned that he had won a prize in a lottery, and suggested that Wilde go with him. It was a very old and worn art but the victim bit. He accompanied his friend to a place on Fifteenth or Seventeenth street and found some men throwing dice. Drexel threw the dice for Wilde and won him quite a sum. He then easily persuaded him to go in the game. Soon the poet began to lose and when a settlement was made found that he was [illegible] out. Not having ready money he gave a check for the amount and played on. Soon he had lost $100 and gave a check for that sum at the solicitation of those who played with him once more. Now thoroughly excited he plunged into the game and came out [illegible] This sobered Wilde and while slowly signing the check on the Madison Square bank for the amount, he weighed in his mind the suspicion that he had been cheated. He went out and hailed a cab and went on a dead run to the Madison Square bank, called the cashier and got the payment stopped. Wilde then confessed to the police captain and recognized Drexel in the rogues' gallery.

Proceedings in the Pinney Trial.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The examination of William Hamilton and Vernon Seaman charged by Geo. M. Pinney with criminal libel was continued before Justice Murray in the court of special sessions to-day. The first witness was the Hon. Henry A. Gildersleeve, judge of the court of general sessions. He testified that he knew only of Pinney's character and reputation in New York, and that it was good. Witness is president of the company, but before consenting to become an officer inquired carefully into its condition finding it good. The working of the new ores and mines have given satisfaction and the proceeds are air. It was expected that a dividend would shortly be declared. The mines are all paid for and there is no outstanding indebtedness.

Richard McCormack, a member of the national republican committee during the last campaign, deposed that Pinney's character was good, but he did not know what congressman Page's opinion of Pinney was.

William T. [illegible] of Forty-second street and Lexington avenue, had met Pinney in California and elsewhere. His reputation was good.

S. T. Wakelee and G. W. Thomas also testified to Pinney's good character and stated that, in their opinion, the prosecution against Pinney in San Francisco originated in political motives caused by a division in the republican party.

C. H. Spencer and Thomas Wallace of San Francisco testified in a similar strain.

R. Ore, bookkeeper of the St. Cloud hotel, testified he knew Seaman and heard the conversation which he took part in at the hotel. Seaman then stated Pinney was a forger, thief and beat in a loud and boisterous manner.

Further hearing will be resumed on January 9th.

Kate Field's Loss.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—About one hundred creditors of the Co-operative Dress association met at the company's store yesterday. In the front rank sat Kate Field. The receiver stated that when he took possession he sheriff had levied on a portion of the goods. All the employes but seventy have been discharged and an inventory of the stock will be ready next week. Arnold, Constable & Co. had consented to cancel the case but it might be sold. He determined to close up the concern as rapidly as possible and saw no reason why creditors should not be paid in full. The secretary read a list of liabilities and assets. It shows the assets to be $[illegible] liabilities $[illegible] The amount includes $16,044 due Miss Field, one of the heaviest creditors.

Why He Refuses.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Mayor Grace says in reply to [illegible] "As it appears from a statement made by you that the hall is to be used for the exclusive purpose of an exhibition of your Passion Play, such exhibition not to take place until some time after the expiration of my term of office, I do hereby deny your application for the reason that I am satisfied of the impropriety of licensing a place to be used for such a purpose." The mayor said this afternoon: "I was advised by many friends to do nothing in this matter, but, after a careful consideration, I have determined to refuse Morse's application. There is nothing to prevent applying to Mr. Edson when he takes possession of this office for a license and if he is again refused he can apply to the courts for a mandamus."

Nilsson's Kindly Nature.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—A boy told a reporter to-day of Nilsson's success at San Francisco, saying: She was invited to the houses of nearly all the prominent people in the city. She seems to make friends everywhere. I could recall several little incidents of her kindly nature. I noticed particularly when the train stopped at Sacramento Mme. Nilsson sat down at the piano in the drawing room car and sang "Hard Times Will Come Again No More." When she finished the tune she saw a number of people standing near the door and immediately she returned to the piano and sang, "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," and she was singing when the train pulled out of the station.

A Pioneer Printer.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The Post says John Crawford will leave the composing room of the Post to-morrow after a continuous and faithful service of fifty-six years, entering the office in 1826 as a boy of fifteen years to serve his time. Probably no other compositor in the country can boast of so long a service in one office.

Booth's Theater Sold.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—The Herald says: Booth's theater has been sold for $[illegible] The theater will remain in its present possession until May, when the doors will be closed and the work of transforming the house for commercial purposes will be commenced.

CONGRESS.

THE BONDED SPIRITS BILL.

Congressional Chit Chat—Progress of the Tax Extension—Gossip About the Porter Bill.

[illegible]

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. [illegible]—In the senate [illegible] the Fitz John Porter bill was discussed and Logan addressed the senate.

Logan made an argument in opposition to the bill. [illegible] republican senate [illegible] Porter [illegible] the court martial [illegible] trial was of Porter [illegible] The board [illegible] saved the union army. The fact was that nearly the whole confederate army were attacking Pope with [illegible] while Porter was lying by with 12,000 with arms stacked. If the whole union army had stacked arms therefore nobody would have been hurt. But Porter didn't save the army by stacking the arms of the army [illegible] defeated. The board went upon the erroneous theory of the finding of the court martial based on the report of August [illegible] The board perverted a distorted evidence in every way. There was a reason for this. At the time the board was organized McDowell was of an age to retire with Pope the next ranking officer and two members of the board applicants for his place. Up to the time of Pope's retirement and confirmation constant war was waged on him with a view to breaking him down to some one else's advantage. In the effort to make a case for Porter it was said President Lincoln was convinced that the finding of the court martial was wrong and intended to give him a new trial. This could not be true. Lincoln knew he had no such power. Moreover, he [illegible] Robert Lincoln [illegible] his estimation would have justified a sentence of death. It is not true that President Garfield repented of his action in the court martial as he knew from conversation with him.

Logan had a letter from Garfield to Gen. Cox, of Ohio, on the subject received in confirmation of Porter's letters to Burnside, which showed his animus toward Pope. Logan intimated that Porter was responsible for the defeat of McDowell at the first battle of Bull Run because he persuaded Patterson not to attack Joe Johnston in the valley of Virginia. Johnston, by a move from Winchester, defeated McDowell, but if Patterson had attacked him he would have been kept in the valley. So Porter lost both battles of Bull Run just because the army in each case was commanded by a western man. The fact was a Clellan, Porter and several others who could be named formed a little coterie of regular army officers in the army of the east. One of them was to be president and the others were to be God only knows what. But it was understood among them even as early as the first battle of Bull Run that no western man should command an eastern army. Speaking of Porter's failure to obey Pope's order to march for Bristow Station at [illegible] o'clock in the morning, Logan said: You may search military history from Cyrus and Alexander down to the present time and this is the only instance you will find where a subordinate ever sent word to his superior officer so clear was it to him that he could move. (Laughter.) And there never was a commanding officer except then Pope who would not have removed a subordinate from his command for sending him such a message [illegible] said recently that Porter could not move because the road was obstructed. That commander I [illegible] said, said a different thing upon the subject. [illegible] marching [illegible] be led [illegible] and in support of his statement he [illegible] death's military history [illegible] march and made on the order of Gen. Grant because the troops had [illegible]

A friend new [illegible] said Logan, pointing to Miller of California, who marched on a rainy night with [illegible] men [illegible] them there until a [illegible] [illegible]. [Murmurs of applause.]

McPherson said that [illegible] rather [illegible] for favoring the bill was that a [illegible] who brought the order [illegible] Porter was there [illegible] upon the road in daylight [illegible] obstruction [illegible] asked [illegible] whether this was or was not true.

Logan replied that if the officer was there [illegible] on the way it was probably because he was in a hurry as the order [illegible] till one and Capt. [illegible] who carried it arrived at [illegible] As to the statement referred to by McPherson that there were about 2000 wagons on the road [illegible] [illegible] every army man knew it would be impossible to put 2000 wagons [illegible]

McPherson—[illegible] of these [illegible] 1000 wagons?

Logan—Oh, then it was a bigger road than I thought it was.

McPherson—I think the senator ought to correct his arithmetic a little.

Logan—Now that is a curious phase of the matter. It was big for wagons, but a little small for men. [Laughter.]

Logan said he further evidence of a certain captain who marched his company along the road that night to Bristow station showed that no obstruction was on the road.

There was some cross firing between Logan and McPherson on the relative merits of Grant's statement and that of the unnamed captain. At [illegible] Logan yielded the floor.

On a motion to go into executive session the doors opened and the senate adjourned until Tuesday.

Congressional Chit Chat.

THE WHISKY BUSINESS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—A gentleman thoroughly posted in the whisky business says there is a great deal of pretense about the appeal of the distillers for relief by the Sturgis bill through the two years extension of time for payment of the tax on goods in warehouse. He says the talk about the eighty or ninety millions of gallons which must be taken out soon if the bill should not pass therefore bankrupting the trade and affecting financial circles generally, is no use. There is no danger of a panic during the coming year on account of whisky and there are no [illegible] that must be paid during the coming season. The whisky which must be unbonded during 1883 amounts to only 14,000,000 gallons on which the tax amounts to $14,000,000. The whisky men themselves in their resolutions [illegible] claim that the consumption by the country of their goods is fifteen million gallons per year. [illegible] by fifteen millions [illegible] gallons obviously that the amount upon which they are asked to pay a tax during the entire year of 1883. In fact, distillers can hardly think [illegible] with ease [illegible] Hell[illegible] can [illegible] the congress to pass a law which will benefit them by allowing them to hold spirits in store with a tax unpaid for a year longer, during which time it would double in value. This is the secret of the whole movement of whisky going out in bond. They have more than they need but if they can hold it at government expense two years longer and [illegible] their [illegible] [illegible] distillers and to the meantime the country would be supplied with a bunch [illegible] compound whiskies which this bourbon is getting additional [illegible] Wm. Thomas King is said to be among the whisky men who are asking the loan of $90,000,000 for two years from the [illegible] He was here last night. We have [illegible] seen in the senate whenever we call [illegible] them. It was [illegible] persons would recognize the name of a certain great speculator if he happened to be referred to in the newspapers as Mr. Jason Gould. Jason, however, is the name by which Jay Gould was christened when he was a person of exceedingly small importance in this world and the brightness of his name. He disliked Jason and liked Jay, and he always signed himself so.

THE FITZ JOHN PORTER BILL.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—The Fitz John Porter bill will pass the senate without any doubt, said Senator Cameron of Wisconsin. Porter is one of Sewell's constituents. Sewell will vote for the bill, so will Don Cameron, a Porter being a democrat all the democrats in the senate will vote for him and with [illegible] Don Cameron, they will have a majority. [illegible] Cameron does not think the letter which Gen. Grant recently published has had any effect in changing public sentiment [illegible] Logan [illegible] a wonderful speech and Carpenter attacked the bill from a legal standpoint. Carpenter made a very fine argument on the ground that congress had no right to [illegible] the court martial. Congressman Hubbell says: "While it might be true that congress has not the right, it certainly has the power and has freely exercised it." He believed, however, that there was but a chance of the Porter bill being passed by the house.

PENSION INCREASE.

There is no [illegible] doubt as to what action the senate committee [illegible] will take in relation to the [illegible] petitions of a [illegible] [illegible] who lost an arm or leg in the service. DE LONG'S LAST REPORT.

The Record of Thrilling Hardships and Undaunted Bravery Shown in the Arctic Ocean.

[illegible] makes [illegible] It [illegible] departure from San Francisco [illegible] of the [illegible] latitude [illegible] a [illegible] judgment [illegible] after [illegible] 1881. His ship was [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] graphically [illegible] the next day the Jeannette [illegible] [illegible] to be relieved at [illegible] The party was compelled to make a [illegible] [illegible] we were [illegible] at times all right [illegible] a [illegible] day and night from Jan. [illegible] to Feb. [illegible]

Sweetman and Sunderland [illegible] the [illegible] with [illegible] water [illegible] and [illegible] nearly to their knees working faithfully until their work was [illegible] and the [illegible] water [illegible] gradually reduced amount of water coming into the ship and the ability to control the leak without such a ruinous expenditure of fuel as has been necessary therefor. For these reasons I have had the honor to commend these two men to you for medals of honor as a recognition of heroic conduct under the most trying circumstances.

Capt. De Long's record of the remainder of the winter and summer of 1880 is a most monotonous record of [illegible] movements, constant anxiety and [illegible] of unbroken disappointment. As the short [illegible] [illegible] drew to a close without setting the Jeannette free and another dreary winter approached, Capt. De Long evidently began to resolve in his mind the question whether it would not be better to abandon the ship and make for the northern coast of Siberia over the ice than run the risk of a second winter in the pack.

Under date of Sept. 20, 1880 he says: I dislike naturally to dwell on the idea of abandonment of the ship. We have come through so much that it gives us hopes of surviving more. So long as enough of the ship remains to shelter us all, king-[illegible] that fragment is preferable to camping on the ice, and I can conceive of no greater forlorn hope than an attempt to reach Siberia say 240 miles distant, over the ice that surrounds us and with the winter's cold sapping ones life at every step. Of course if we were to lose our ship we would make the effort to get there but our chances of success would be extremely problematical.

The last entry in the record dated Dec. 31, 1880 is as follows:

Minutes and ringing in of the new year in lat. [illegible] long. 177 [illegible], 32 miles east. During the past 16 months we have drifted 1[illegible] miles [illegible] If it had been in a straight line [illegible] carry us to and beyond the pole, but we are just [illegible] [illegible] of where we were first [illegible] We have suffered injury and danger has often confronted us. We have been squeezed and [illegible] tumbled; we pumped the leaking ship for a year but are not yet daunted and are as ready to dare everything as ever, and we face the new year truly hoping to do something worthy of ourselves, of Bennett's enterprise and of the flag above us.

In less than ten months after these words were written the Jeannette was at the bottom of the Arctic ocean and De Long lay dead in the Lena Delta.

BLACK BALLOTS.

Decision of Judge Parks that the Tickets Used in the Recent Elections in Connecticut are Illegal.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

NEW HAVEN, Dec. [illegible]—The democratic black ballots used in New Haven at the recent city and state elections were printed from type on white paper [illegible] the names of candidates in white. The decision of Chief Justice Parks that the ballots are illegal given yesterday changes the entire complexion of the city government and overturns a democratic majority of about three thousand. It also applies to the state ballots and with this decision [illegible] those are unstained it will certainly now be in some. Wm. H. Buckley of Hartford, republican candidate for governor in an interview said:

"I believe legally the whole republican ticket was elected at the state election. I cannot see how the legislature can decide otherwise in view of Judge Park's decision. Supposing the case has assumed [illegible] distinct [illegible] I should much rather that a contest of the kind had not arisen. [illegible] question. It is a very unpleasant subject to discuss. I am to be governed by circumstances and consider what is best for the state. I [illegible] I am frank to say to you that according to the law [illegible] I don't see how they can overlook the law they have passed. The democratic ballot is simply a direct violation of the law, just as much as if I took a watch from a man's pocket on the street. What will be done is not for me to say. I am, you understand, simply a passenger."

"Would you take the office under these circumstances?"

"It is not for me to say. If the legislature declares the republican state ticket elected, certainly Waller could not hold the office. What I will do I decline to discuss."

"But are the republican tickets equally illegal?"

"We took counsel before the ballots were printed. We are satisfied they will hold." Charles J. Cole, chairman of the republican state central committee, first advanced the plan that the state democratic ballot was void. He to-day distinctly mapped out the republican plan as follows: A petition will be brought to the legislature setting forth the facts in accordance with Judge Park's decision and asking legislation. "I would rather those ballots had been cast legally, as as it to have [illegible] this case arise, but it must now be treated according to law. The committee on the canvass must, according to the constitution, declare the republican party elected. My opinion is that it is the duty of the republican candidates to take their offices. I don't know what they will do, but they should. They have the right [illegible] the other citizens to decline."

As to what the republican candidates would do Mr. Cole said he had no idea. Thomas M. Waller of New London was elected governor on the face of the returns but over 4000 of the republican tickets opposed to him were on black border, but the names were printed on white paper in black letters. The only plain tickets polled were cast by German Americans, a strict Sabbatarian and liquor law interpretation party. This party polled upwards of 2000 votes, endorsing all the democratic state candidates but one, while the democrats make the claim that if the democratic ticket is illegal the republicans' ticket being also thrown out, the democratic candidates will be elected by the votes of the progressive union. They are preparing to take Justice Parks' ticket before a full bench of the five judges of the Connecticut supreme court. The preliminary steps are promised for to-morrow. There was much doubt among republicans in New Haven and vicinity concerning the republican black bordered ballots. Several prominent republicans turned off the border before casting votes. In Guilford every republican vote was shorn of its black border before it was cast. It is being questioned whether a moderator would receive it in its original shape. Prominent republicans [illegible] as claim advanced by their leaders. The local candidates for aldermen [illegible] desire to serve [illegible] this election depends on discarding the black ballot. Great excitement is manifested in the position of Chairman Cole. Walter, the governor elect, some days ago expressed the opinion that to throw out the black ballots would, under the circumstances, be an outrage, disfranchising as it would, a thousand voters who had cast their ballots in good faith.

Its policies, simple in form, fair and liberal in terms, contain a specific guarantee of paid up insurance.

Its large dividends, declared annually, are not withheld from policy holders, but can be used as cash in paying premiums.

It is a strictly mutual company, no stockholders, but all profits are equitably divided among its policy holders, there being no preferred class.

Its expenses are lowest, and the investment of its funds and all its business interests are managed with prudence, safety and economy.

It deals in legitimate Life and Endowment Insurance only, and does not issue Tontine policies.

SATURDAY MORNING, DEC. 30, 1882.

A GREAT SCHEME FOR THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

Capt. Merry of San Francisco in urging upon the president the necessity of the Nicaragua canal, rightly said that the passage of the bill to further this great undertaking was earnestly desired by all the people of the Pacific slope. To enable our people to dispose of the products of their industry, which are chiefly of the bulky sort, cheap freights are indispensable. Shorter and therefore cheaper ship communication with Europe is the next thing now to be desired after the completion of the several Pacific railroads. The highly important announcement is made that the president has promised to do all in his power, in his legitimate sphere, to aid in the passage of the bill.

What is asked by the movers of the bill is a guaranty by the United States of net earnings of three per cent. per annum upon an assumed cost of construction of $75,000,000. Should the actual cost prove to be less, then the United States guaranty is to be limited by such actual cost. It is doubtful, indeed, whether the proposed guaranty will create any draft upon the treasury of the United States. The beneficial effects, the importance of which justifies the proposed guaranty, are the assurance it gives to contributors of private capital of a fixed return upon their investment, and of continued protection of the enterprise of private citizens by their own government. The bill excludes all liability on the part of the United States for the principal.

The canal is to begin at Greytown on the Atlantic side and terminate at Brito Harbor on the Pacific. The total distance by the survey is 173½ miles. Of this distance 120 miles are by the river San Juan and lake Nicaragua, where navigation is already open, and may be maintained for deepest vessels without expense. From Greytown to the river the distance is 36 miles; from the lake to Brito it is 7 miles. The deepest cut will be 41½ feet. San Juan river is from 600 to 1200 feet wide. A dam just below the intersection of the canal with the river will have a height of 49 feet, which will give slack water navigation up to the lake. It is supposed that a vessel can be towed through the canal in 36 hours, allowing 8 hours for detention. The canal is to be 150 feet wide at the surface of the water, and will have a depth of 26 feet.

Ten different surveys and examinations of proposed routes across the isthmus have been executed under authority of the United States during the last quarter of a century. It is certain from these investigations that the Nicaragua route possesses, both for construction and maintenance of a canal, greater advantages and offers fewer difficulties from engineering, commercial and economic points of view, than any one of the other routes. It is remarkable indeed that the deepest cutting through the Cordillera is but little over 40 feet, and is not long. Then through the advantages offered by lake and river there will be uninterrupted navigation on the summit level, without a lock, for a distance of 120 miles. Again, the great natural basin of pure fresh water, covering an area of 3500 square miles, presents advantages that cannot easily be overestimated. There will be no detentions of seagoing vessels in small artificial basins, and ships' bottoms will be cleared of marine growth by their passage through fresh water.

Shipments of wheat from our Pacific slope to Europe have already exceeded 1,200,000 tons in a single year. The loss in sailing distance is [illegible] miles, the expense of which bears heavily upon the wheat growers of the Pacific slope. Therefore to them the canal would be an almost inestimable advantage. Including the wheat business an estimate of 5,000,000 tons of freight annually through the canal does not appear at all excessive. At the rate of $250 per ton for all charges in the canal, the annual revenue upon the estimated tons of freight would very largely exceed the liability proposed by the guaranty of the United States. Charges are to be reduced whenever the net earnings shall exceed the limitation proposed by the bill. Full arrangements have been made with the government of Nicaragua for execution of the undertaking.

The movers of the bill are right in claiming that the present is a propitious time for encouraging American enterprise in this direction. Public interest is now specially awakened in its importance. Money is abundant and seeking at low rates of interest secure investments. Improved machinery will greatly diminish the necessary expenditure, and private capital is ready for works of this character as it never was before.

One thing, however, will be necessary—the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. This treaty binds us with Great Britain, to observe strict neutrality in regard to any Nicaragua canal that may be constructed. But of course we cannot build this canal without having the right to protect and therefore to control it. But the treaty may be terminated by proper notice, which should be given before the work of construction is begun.

THE CRIMINAL LAW.

A glance at some of the provisions of the new criminal code of New York will serve to indicate what changes are taking place in this important branch of the law. A number of punishments are prescribed for those persons who interfere with the transaction of business by the legislature, and public officers are protected by new provisions against attempts to frighten them from the performance of duty. There is a section against conspiracies which has excited a good deal of hostile criticism because it is alleged to bear against the rights of the working classes to organize labor unions. But this view is not sustained by those who prepared the code, as it is held that this section enforces nothing new, being substantially a digest of the old laws relating to conspiracy. Those who wish to combine for honest purposes can form any sort of union or organization they choose to establish, and maintain every right and advance every interest to which they are entitled under the law.

A singular thing is a new section making attempt at suicide a punishable offense; and there is a provision against maiming one's self, either to escape military or other legal duty, or to excite sympathy in order to obtain alms. The Sunday laws have been placed distinctly on the ground that their sole object is to protect "the repose and religious liberty of the community" from interruption, and not to promote religious observance. Another section makes it a misdemeanor for any innkeeper or common carrier to refuse to receive any guest or passenger—a provision intended to protect Jews and others from unjust discriminations.

Many sections, seemingly new, are based on common law principles, such as penalties for eaves-dropping, loitering at the scene of a riot, betting on prize fights, compelling a person to sign a paper, signing a person's name to a prospectus without his permission, overdrawing personal account by bank officers, stopping work in such a way as to injure property or endanger life, and publishing false messages or proclamations of an executive. Since these are specimens of the criminal code of the greatest of our states, it will be seen that, on the whole, the criminal law is not so much in need of amendment as some would imagine. It would naturally be supposed that in the leading state of the union many vices of recent development might be ranked as crimes, but the code makers seem to have been very conservative in this respect. No important changes are made in the law against lotteries, gambling, etc., so that all kinds of "speculation" remain "legitimate" as heretofore.

The Gospel in "Fonetik" Garb.

A revised version of the new testament has been printed in "fonetik" style. The familiar introduction looks thus:

The biginnig ov the gospel ov Jizus Crist, the Son ov God, as it iz ritn in the profets, Behold, I send mi mesenjer befor thi fes, which shal prepar thi we befor thi.

Then comes the well known passage about

The vois ov wun kriing in the wilderness, Prepar ye the we ov the Lord, mek his paths stret.

While the next verse which says that

Jon did baptiz in the wilderness, and prich the baptizm ov repentans for the rimishun ov sinz—

looks ever more intoxicated. Everybody will, of course, recognize this, although the ears are rather disguised.

And hi sent outh them, [illegible] het hi [illegible] to hur hiz [illegible].

We do not think the most exacting fonetik filosofer would ask us to give more.

Capt. D. L. Payne of the Oklahama colony, which went out from Kansas to settle upon lands claimed by Indians of the Creek and Seminole tribes, and from which the colony was removed by the military under orders of Gen. Pope, has taken his case to the courts of the United States, in the form of a suit against Gen. Pope for damages. The case is likely to be an interesting one. It is claimed by the plaintiff that the lands were relinquished to the United States by the Indians in the year 1866. By an act of congress of that year it was provided that the president should cause the lands to be surveyed on the proposed line of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad, passing through the tract, alternate sections to go to the company and the other sections to be thrown open for settlement under the preemption and homestead laws. In pursuance of the treaty the government paid the Indians for the lands; and in pursuance of decisions of the supreme court it is held that public lands may be settled on though not proclaimed for sale. If these be facts, Capt. Payne would seem to have a clear case against Gen. Pope, who, however, acted under the orders of the president.

Certain papers are taken to task by the Albany Democrat for saying that Gov. Whiteaker, in a message to the legislature in 1862 remarked that there had been a great flood the year before, and that it would have been still greater had it rained more. This, the Democrat says, is "a mean, contemptible falsehood," and it proceeds to quote what the governor did say. We follow it, viz: "Still, it might have been worse; had it rained for two weeks and continued warm as it was, the whole valley of the Willamette would have been covered with water from mountain to mountain." The Democrat quotes this to "fasten the falsehood upon its authors."

The American Sunday school union, a very old organization, which has accomplished an immense work for the whole country, has been engaged during the present year in raising a special fund to increase its capital and clear its property. In Philadelphia alone the sum of $50,000 has been subscribed, and it is proposed to make the amount $100,000. One man of wealth in New York has offered to make up each sum of $90,000 that may be subscribed to $100,000.

Of the recent railroad wars The Public says: "The railroad managers have destroyed public confidence in their honesty. The public know that these railroad wars were continued and kept up for the purpose of cheating honest holders out of stocks held, and enabling the managers to buy back at low prices." That is plain enough.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Western Oregon.

Flour is very scarce at Newport.

A large foundry is to be established at Corvallis in a few weeks.

The Brownsville Boxer is the latest addition to the list of Oregon newspapers.

Iver O Haaven, an old resident of Astoria, died suddenly at his residence yesterday morning.

The government tug at Newport, on Yaquina bay, is to be sent to Portland, as it cannot be used at present.

Among the best of the county papers in the state is the Corvallis Gazette. This week it begins the twentieth year of its existence. It was founded by T. B. Odeneal, present clerk of the supreme court. The present proprietor, Mr. M. S. Woodcock, says the paper is on a good financial basis and pays a fair remuneration for the time, attention and outlay expended in conducting it."

Washington Territory.

Crab creek country is rapidly settling up with a good class of farmers.

Work on the railroad along the Stuck valley is progressing as rapidly as capital and labor can push it. Several hundred men are now at work clearing and grading.

ACCIDENTS.

A Father and four Children Burned Up.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—A special from Beverley, W. Va., says A. Currence, a prominent Randolph county farmer, was burned to death Wednesday night, with four of his children. His wife was fatally injured also. Currence had lost much sleep through watching with a sick neighbor and Wednesday night was sleeping at home, and while his wife and two children watched at the neighbor's bedside they saw the flames of their own homestead. Before they could get there the walls had fallen, enveloping the five inmates. Mrs. Currence made a frantic but unsuccessful attempt to rescue them, and received burns that will prove fatal. The charred remains were recovered yesterday by neighbors. He was an ex-judge and served in the Thirty-first Virginia regiment during the war.

Fell Through a Trestle.

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Dec. 29.—At a furnace of the Pottstown Iron Company, a shifting engine fell through a trestle work fourteen feet high. Four men were on the engine and fell with it. Edward Manning was fearfully scalded and will probably die.

Boy Burned to Death.

FARLEY, Ia., Dec. 29.—A five year old son of Edwin Catlran was burned to death and two others severely burned, by the falling and explosion of a hanging lamp.

RAILWAY NEWS.

Harmonious Arrangement.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—Kiernan's News says of the Denver and Rio Grande it was expected that Gould would gradually get control. Among the stories in circulation yesterday was one that upon the completion of the road to Salt Lake there would be a harmonious arrangement with the Union Pacific.

Railway Notes.

It is stated on good authority that Jay Gould will assume control of the Galveston, Houston & Henderson railway on January 1.

The general passenger agents of the Chicago and Missouri river roads, met yesterday and fixed the maximum commission on California business at one dollar for all classes.

Seven thousand men are now working on the British Columbia section of the Canadian Pacific railway, and from the reported progress being made the contract will, to all appearances, be completed within the allotted time.

He is Easily Pleased.

A man who was frequently seen in the courts of New York was asked: "How is it that you are such a frequent visitor here?" He replied:

Because it is the best and cheapest amusement I can find, he said. I like to hear the lawyers fight with one another. I like to hear them badger the witnesses. I like to study the physiognomy of jurors and speculate on the verdict. I like to watch the [illegible]. I enjoy the crowded court rooms and the excitement attending all legal contests. It is not only a very cheap amusement, it is as exciting as a horse race, as laughable as a circus, as instructive as a library, as exciting as a base ball match. BUSINESS FOR SALE.

"The land is worth the whole Price."

Make a Fortune.

One of the safest and best investments in the State to any party wishing to go in the business in the city according to the amount of capital invested is now offered by W. M. SWEENEY, that well known and successful contractor to wit:

Five fine heavy work horses and harness, complete. Ten first class wagons, good as new.

One patent Blake Steam Rock Crusher, with bunks and screens, all newly fitted in the latest and most approved style.

Two fine self-propelling dump carts, and five acres of land in the best growing part of the city, situated at the western end of K street, with a living spring of pure water and an inexhaustible supply of the very best rock for all kinds of street improvement purposes.

Price $10,000. As Mr. Sweeney has other and larger interests outside the city which demand his personal attention, he offers this opportunity until April 1, 1883. Parties desirous of investing will hear of other advantages by interviewing Mr. Sweeney personally. Residence northwest corner of Fourteenth and N streets. 16d1eod1f

NEWSPAPERS IN COURT.

The Injunction Suit of the Duniway Publishing Company Against the Northwest News Printing and Publishing Company.

In the state circuit court yesterday, Judge [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

A letter from Washington City, addressed to the [illegible] Publishing company, was delivered at the [illegible] and afterwards by correct order [illegible] the new paper. A letter containing a money order for $[illegible] [illegible] the Duniway [illegible] The plaintiffs say they are unable to enumerate all the mistakes that have occurred [illegible] of them at first, as they had no intention of commencing these proceedings until made aware by experience of the trouble that the proposed new publication has produced.

Argument was then opened by Mr. Mallory, who began by stating that the question at issue was how far the name of the new enterprise was an infringement upon the trade mark of the Duniway Publishing company. He went on to quote a number of decisions and authorities to show that it was not necessary that the name taken by the defendants should be exactly that of the plaintiffs' paper in order to constitute an infringement of their trade mark.

Mr. Simon followed Mr. Mallory, whose argument extended over the noon recess, and occupied the remainder of the afternoon in [illegible] that the defendants and producing authorities to back up his statements. He also set up a defense that it was necessary the new paper should have been published as an imitation of the other with the intention or liability to deceive, and that no case on record had ever been decided before the publication ought to be restrained had been issued. Cases of papers where injunctions had been issued were quoted to show that the intention to deceive the public was what had always been taken into consideration by the courts. Mr. Simon further stated that the action of the defendants in this matter had been entirely [illegible] that they had [illegible] Portland with the avowed intention of starting a paper [illegible] under the title of The Northwest News, [illegible] have invested money and made all the arrangements [illegible] for the publication under such title [illegible] there was such a paper as The New Northwest. When such [illegible] was made it was too late to make a change, and [illegible] change in the title without great [illegible]. Still so [illegible] as possible to avoid confusion between the two papers the defendant stood ready to have their paper known as The Daily [illegible] and [illegible] setting [illegible] prospectus [illegible] to address all [illegible] whether [illegible] The Daily News and leaving out the word Northwest from the [illegible] head upon the [illegible] page.

Mr. Mallory closed with a brief answer to Mr. Simon's arguments making a strong point against the use of the word Northwest in any manner whatever.

The court then allowed the defendants until next Wednesday upon their application to file affidavits [illegible] the [illegible] and a further [illegible] when Mr. Mason will be given two more days in which to reply if the defendants so desire. Meanwhile the paper will [illegible] terms to which they have agreed as stated by Mr. Simon above. Thus the matter rests. The defendants assert that they have conceded all that the law requires of them, and the plaintiffs feel sure that this concession is but the prelude to their complete victory when the court shall pass judgment upon the case.

THE STORM ON THE COAST.

Unprecedented High Water—Much Stock Drowned—Supposed Loss of the Kate and Anna.

Mr. C. W. Hellenbrand of Salem writes to THE OREGONIAN as follows, under date of yesterday:

I have just received a letter from my brother living in the Little Nestucca, Tillamook county. He writes that the water has been higher than ever was known before. The new bridge on the Little Nestucca is gone, and the road out into the valley is impassable. The schooner Kate and Anna has not arrived yet and is at least two weeks overdue. Every one fears she is lost. She was loaded with flour, etc., for Nestucca and Tillamook bay. He says he does not believe there is 200 pounds of flour in the valley. The whole neighborhood was to turn out next morning to try to clear up the road to Grand Ronde. Nearly all the stock on the Big Nestucca is reported drowned.

TIGER-SHOOTING ON THE HILLS.

It was about mid-day of the 29th of March, 18—, that news was brought me of a large tiger at the Maharajpore waterfalls called "Moti-la Jharna." Almost about the same time a friend (a great sportsman) came from Maldah to my camp at Rajmahl with a view of accompanying me in some of my shooting excursions, as he knew I was always going somewhere for sport. I was indeed very glad to see him, and especially on account of the bagh ka khubber just brought.

"Well, Whin," said my friend Erst "how have you been pulling along these twenty days which I believe is about the time since I last saw you?" "Very well, thanks, I rejoined "but I hear poor Joe is still suffering from fever." "Yes, by-the-by, he is, but what a strange thing is March and fever. Well the more we live the more we learn." I say," added [illegible] "do you remember our last hunt at Peer-pointee? What a scratch, upon my word. The tiger well nigh took your [illegible]." Ah! yes, the [illegible] but hang that, have you any news to give?"

"Well, perhaps I have, what then? Do you suppose I am going to gratify your wish any [illegible] nay, not yet." "Ah! let us hear anything good." "No, not yet, come, there is luncheon on the table, and the rest by and by." So saying, I drew up my chair, my friend followed suit, and we had a hearty tiff washing it down with a bottle of good Burgundy then offering my friend a cheroot, and taking one myself we all leisurely into the sitting room and betaking ourselves to two easy chairs we sat puffing and chatting away until two, when I rose and told my companion it was high time to get ready, for our friend Mr. Stripes would [illegible] and miss us if we came late, and the ac[illegible] [illegible] distance was not short so putting spurs to our steeds we galloped off never as much on our way exchanging a word with each other. We arrived in good time and met the Sonthals who had brought me khubber sitting at the foot of the hills where I had ordered them to await me.

Here we dismounted, and leaving the horses with some of the men, made a straight for the basin where the tiger used to come to drink. Now the question arose where we were to take up our position, so as to be hidden from [illegible] observation, and still command a look of the entire basin. "A ledge of overhanging rock," remarked Erst, "is about the best but where to find that?" "Let us ascend a little to our left, and I think we shall find some suitable place." "Yes, I think so," we climbed a little higher and got a place that suited us to "a T." The arrangements completed, we took up our posts, and sat quietly watching. One, two, three hours passed and nothing appeared, although once we heard a rustle, but it turned out to be a boar. Night had now fairly set in, and were it not for the moon, who favored us with her light we would have been wrapped in total darkness. However, that night was not to be a blank in our sporting diary, and an hour or so after the old [illegible]'s appearance, we saw before us a beautiful royal bengal, of which even a Rajah need be proud. From where or how he came was matter for conjecture as none of us (although we kept an unremitting watch) saw or heard his approach. But here he was, as large as life, and none could doubt his presence. We would fain have looked on, but our visitor seemed uneasy and was suspiciously eyeing every corner as if he knew there was danger lurking about him. I do not know what made him suspicious but that he had become so was beyond a doubt. His head was turning from side to side, his grim orbs flashing like balls of fire, and he appeared as if doubtful what to do. Once he looked up in our direction and we thought we were discovered then advancing quickly a few paces he halted steadfastly gazing at some object at our right. Then, as if to draw a motion from what he suspected, he crouched, finding however everything still and motionless he rose and walked deliberately towards the water, reaching which he stooped and looked up again. And well might he have looked for just then were pointed at him two deadly weapons by hands that never failed, and the next moment leapt forth two burning streams amidst two deafening reports that made the hills reverberate.

And stirred wild nature's beauty from the rock [illegible]
To a depth unknown, and from whence no sound we heard,
Save that of the wounded creature, in his dying throes.

One dull moan—that moan so full of significance and rare delight to a practical ear and all is still. The work of blood was done. We did not leave our places but determined to stop there till the morning as nothing could be more dangerous than finding our way out of the jungles at that late hour of the night. Nothing, however, occurred worth notice, and the night passed rather heavily.

The grey tinge of morning appeared, the wild notes of the jay could be heard, the chirping of some thousands of sparrows along with a flock of minas, showed that daybreak was at hand. Rising and telling my companion who was still asleep, that it was time we should be gone, I ordered the men (four in number) who were with us to follow. We moved on but instead of a retrograde march down hill I was walking in a southerly direction which would take us to the summit. My friend observing this inquired whither I was going, and on my telling him that I proposed going to the top to see if we could not spy some game which would add to our bag my friend seemed pleased, and added that it was just like me to make the most of it while I could. A half hour's ascent brought us to the summit and from here we looked about, and though I spied a deer once, it was too far to shoot. My friend also saw one, but for the same reason did not fire. "Come, let us go to the hill yonder," I said to Erst, "and see if we cannot meet with better luck." "All right," he rejoined and we were soon on its brow trying to catch a glimpse of some unfortunate stag who might happen to be close by. But in this we were disappointed, seeing them descend by herds of ten and twelve toward the plain. While we were still gazing on our intended victims and chewing as one may imagine the end of vexation, we heard the men hail out "Sahib, sahib," and on looking round saw them standing near a large cave beckoning us to come. We went up directly and they told us that there was some animal inside as they heard something like a sneeze, and on going close distinctly recognized the breathing of some large beast. "What do you think it is Erst?" "Why it may be a tiger who can say." "That is just what I fancy it is. Well how do you propose to get him out. Get him out, that is beyond our power, we may bawl and shout as much as we like but we shall never get him to budge and he may rest assured. Had we [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] My friend dividing my [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] it was sprang out, whether he [illegible] [illegible] but this [illegible] certain that he [illegible] his head [illegible] were it not for my bearer Ramkissen, who [illegible] him as he [illegible] I should have been [illegible] [illegible] the ball and smash [illegible] [illegible]. But the tiger did not go so [illegible] though dealt with so suddenly. I did not [illegible] him escape so easily for the moment I saw his body above [illegible] though in mid air I fired shooting him through his hindquarters (as we afterward found) and getting [illegible] he knocked one [illegible] on the head by one of his hind paws [illegible] in contact with my [illegible]. While I fell pell mell Erst did not stand an idle spectator but watching the tiger as he descended sent a ball after him hitting him on the shoulder which sent him rolling to the bottom of the [illegible] if I may be allowed to call it valley. Here we met the brute trying to drag himself away when I gave him the coup de grace. And thus we bagged two tigers the first measuring 9 feet 8 inches and the second 9 feet 3 inches from tip of nose to tip of tail.

Needle painting is the latest contribution to decorative art. By its means alone a lady of Cincinnati has already completed a number of landscape pictures which are said by connoisseurs to be remarkable productions with the needle equaling in effect, if not surpassing the finest oil and water colors. Several artists and prominent society people are making an effort to have them exhibited so that ladies who have a penchant for embroidery and home decoration may see how easily and inexpensively it has become to beautify their homes with their own handiwork.

Apparently a miser's perturbed spirit has been guiding a woman living near Atlanta to look for his buried treasure. A year ago last summer she dreamed that there was some money which had been concealed by a miser buried near by her home. She did not heed the dream and soon even the memory of it was lost. Recently she dreamed a second time of the same circumstance. The dream made such a deep impression on her mind that she determined to make the search it pointed out. She went to the place according to the Atlanta Constitution and there hid by the miser's hand she found about $600 in silver and gold.

This [illegible] in the seaming dissatisfaction among shippers generally who claim they have been unfairly treated by the railroads in giving contracts to any one who asked for them thus depriving large merchants of a portion of their trade and without giving [illegible] [illegible]. Merchants also complain of the action of [illegible] in withholding notice as to whether contracts [illegible] [illegible] embarrassing position. Even now official [illegible] has not yet been promulgated although there is authority for stating that existing contracts will not be disturbed next year. Still there is a possibility that they may be disturbed for the reason that a subdivision of rates between eastern trunk lines and lowa pool and Pacific roads was not definitely settled at the late meeting. Freight [illegible] who are very much dissatisfied may [illegible] [illegible] in [illegible] leaving contracts [illegible] the mercy [illegible] open [illegible] until they can arrange to ship by clipper.

The [illegible] Sefton and the [illegible] are the leading ones but neither of them can sail this year although an effort will be made to clear the former to morrow notwithstanding she will require 500 tons to fill. Rates are quoted easily but are not firm in view of the dull state of the market. There is still a scarcity of available ships in this and neighboring ports and although the demand is not active rates are very fair. There are no new engagements for Calif [illegible] trade which has tonnage sufficient for nearly thirty days. Overland freights were rather quiet last week.

ALL CHRONIC & DIFFICULT DISEASES

DR. BRENAN WILL GUARANTEE TO CURE [illegible] form of disease of the generative organs or [illegible] He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female including diseases caused by the

FOLLIES OF YOUTH,

Such as Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness, or Loss of Perfect Vitality. Nearly two thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring either directly or indirectly from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician at a time from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance and permit these diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope [illegible] blighted until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.

Everything strictly confidential under all circumstances.

Consultation Free, and a list of printed questions sent to those living at a distance who cannot consult him personally. Enclose postage stamp for list.
